CALL FOR SPECIAL SESSION ISSUED

Oklahoma Solons Will Attempt to Impeach Governor.

TO CONVENE ON OCTOBER 17

Call Based on the Legal Presumption That Initiative Petition No. 79 Became a Law Tuesday Evening and That Certification of the Election to the State Secretary Is Not Necessary—Strategy of Walton's Foes.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 6.—Impeachment of Governor J. C. Walton will be attempted by the Oklahoma legislature Oct. 17.

A call for a special session of the legislature on that date was issued by W. D. McBee, a member of the house of representatives from Stephens county.

The call was promulgated almost immediately upon an apparent pre-arranged influx of mail and telegraphic requests for the session from more than a majority of the members of the house and was based upon the legal presumption that at 7 o'clock last Tuesday evening initiative petition No. 79, which permits a legislative majority to summon investigating and impeachment sessions without gubernatorial authority, became a definite law and that neither certification of the election by the state election board nor any other procedure was necessary. The text of the call is carefully drawn, in strict conformity to law.

The governor is not named in the call, which states the legislature is called to meet at noon, October 17, "for the purpose of investigating the commission of impeachable offenses by officers of the state subject to impeachment, as provided in article 8 of the constitution of Oklahoma."

The political strategy of the ready acquiescence in the continuance of Governor Walton's suit to restrain the state election board from certifying Tuesday's election to the secretary of state became manifest in this latest action. It now appears, according to legal interpretation of the election statutes, that Tuesday's election, particularly that part of it applying to initiative petition No. 79, does not have to be certified to the state secretary, nor is its certification to anybody else absolutely essential, yet the governor's opponents gave the impression that they were being restrained from acting, whereas in reality, they were secretly making preparations for the special legislative call, which was mailed before any inkling of it reached outside the "rebel circle."

W. C. McAllister, secretary of the state election board, said certification of the election was unnecessary to make it legal.

PAL MORAN WINS

Scores Technical Knockout in His Bout With Charlie White.

New York, Oct. 6.—Fighting the greatest fight of his long career, Pal Moran of New Orleans put the championship aspirations of Charlie White of Chicago to rout at Madison Square Garden, when in the fourteenth round of the scheduled 15 round fight the New York boxing commission physicians ordered the fight stopped. When the doctors intervened White was stretched out on the canvas with blood spurting from his nose and mouth and Patsy Haley, the referee, had reached the count of eight over his prostrate form.

The fight between the two lightweights, which was for the chance of meeting Benny Leonard for the championship, was one of the most spectacular ever staged in New York City. Starting out slow and uninteresting it wound up in a blaze of glory with Pal Moran staging one of the greatest comebacks ever seen in a local ring. Practically out on his feet at the end of the eleventh round Pal came back in the twelfth and succeeding rounds and hammered White all over the ring.

Klan Abandons Activities. Ironton, O., Oct. 6.—The Ku Klux Klan has abandoned its activities here, according to a statement by S. F. Moore, organizer. Lack of interest, he said, due to newspaper attacks, caused the order for cessation of activities by the state organization.

Carrie Clark, 3, months old, was killed in New York by a brick which fell from the eleventh floor of a new building and through the top of an auto in which the child lay.

REFUSES CRABBE'S REQUEST

Donahey Charges "Cheap Politics" in the McNamara Case.

Columbus, Oct. 6.—Refusal of Governor Donahey to act on charges filed against Assistant Welfare Director John McNamara, Sr., pertaining to alleged misconduct under two former state administrations, may end the controversy, insofar as Attorney General Crabbe is concerned. This was indicated by the attorney general after receiving Governor Donahey's reply to his letter reiterating a demand that the McNamara charges be investigated.

Governor Donahey's letter to the attorney general contained a rebuke for the latter's insistence in pressing the demand for an investigation. Crabbe's interest in the affairs of the "Girls' Industrial school" is merely "cheap politics," the governor declared. He denied that McNamara has been identified with the management of the institution since the removal of Mrs. Mae E. Stannard as chief matron last June and told the attorney general that he "should know and probably does know that Mr. McNamara has had no connection with the school, it being in charge of Miss Pangborn, as acting matron."

Willis Slightly Injured. Delaware, O., Oct. 6.—Frank B. Willis is at his home with an injured right hand, the result of an automobile accident in northern Ohio.

CONFLICT WITH FINLAND LOOMS

Action By Russia Apprehended at Washington.

MAY INVOLVE BALTIC STATES

Finland Refuses Compliance With Russia's Demands For Satisfaction For the Killing of Two Soviet Officials by Finns, Strongly Denying Guilty Knowledge of the Assassinations—Poland's Position.

Washington, Oct. 6.—War clouds are gathering over eastern Europe, which may involve Russia in conflict with the Baltic states, advices received by the state department and Finnish legation indicate.

Hard upon the heels of the department's announcement that a new ultimatum was delivered to Finland by Russia, demanding satisfaction for the murder of two soviet officials, came the statement from the legation that the foreign office replied to the Russian communication, refusing compliance with its demands.

The Russian government's note recalled the recent murder of the two soviet members of the Karelian boundary commission, Lavroff and Leshnev, declared they were killed by Finns, and announced the Finnish government would be held responsible for their deaths. The demands included appointment of a mixed commission to investigate the assassinations, punishment of the assassins in accordance with Russian law and the deposit of 1,500,000 gold marks by Finland to guarantee the indemnification of the families of the dead men. CPbit x . . . said . . . calysab . . . fh . . . Finnish Foreign Minister Vennola's reply denies guilty knowledge of the assassinations, refuses to accept responsibility for them, and refuses compliance with the Russian demands.

Officials here view the situation with considerable concern. Finland, they say, already has shown sufficient strength to win her independence from Russia, and since then has contracted an alliance with the "Baltic triplets," Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Should Russia attack Finland, officials say, it is probable that her three Baltic allies would align themselves with her at once, and there is the further chance that Poland would do likewise, as Warsaw would view with disquiet eyes any encroachment by Moscow upon the Polish corridor to the Baltic. Russia admittedly has one of the most powerful and best equipped armies in Europe.

CLAIMS HE BOUGHT FREEDOM FROM WIFE

Canton Man Charged With Child Abandonment.

Canton, O., Oct. 6.—John Bankhurst, arrested in Chicago, was brought back here to face a charge of child abandonment, preferred by his wife.

Bankhurst protested that he had bought his freedom from his wife in this city for $4,000 and that she had not "played fair." The woman for whom he said he purchased his freedom, a former English Red Cross nurse, declared she would follow him back to Canton to "see that justice is done." She has a two-year-old child.

The former nurse said she met Bankhurst, formerly a public accountant, in Salem, O. She had come to America after the armistice and was a nurse in a hospital for former soldiers, she explained. "We fell in love," she said. "John went to Mrs. Bankhurst and told her about it. The three of us discussed it frankly and finally she agreed that if he would pay her $4,000 and go out of her life in a quiet way she would make no trouble."

They went to Cleveland, she continued, and believing that the wife had carried out her agreement to get a divorce, they had a marriage ceremony and later went to Chicago. Last April, she said, they learned no divorce had been granted and they then had their marriage annulled.

Delegates to the American Oil Men's association predicted price of gasoline will increase during the winter and spring.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Addition to Capitol Proposed. Columbus, Oct. 6.—Ohio's proposed new state office building may take the form of additions to the present state house annex building, or some other additional structure on the present state house grounds, it was indicated by a member of the state office building commission. One proposal is to build wings on the north and south fronts of the annex, which is located just east of the original capitol building. Another suggestion is to add a structure directly east of the annex on the vacant section facing Third street.

Kills Wife's Betrayer. Elyria, O., Oct. 6.—Mack Manning, 28, colored, riddled the body of Richard Atwood, 29, also colored, with bullets when the two met at Lorain. Manning is held on a murder charge. Manning charges that the slain man eloped with his wife from Gary, Ind. and in a quarrel at Sandusky a few days ago, Atwood slashed Mrs. Manning five times, took $68 from her and fled.

No Action on McGannon's Request. Columbus, Oct. 6.—Application for parole from Ohio penitentiary of Judge William H. McGannon, former municipal court judge at Cleveland, was continued indefinitely by the board of clemency, subject to call of the board. McGannon, serving a term for perjury, has applied for parole several times and his case was recently continued to the October meeting of the board.

Received Threatening Letter. Toledo, Oct. 6.—Mrs. F. S. Doyle, widow of the late Judge John H. Doyle, has left her home and police are guarding the dwelling as the result of her receipt of a threatening letter. The note read: "Your home will be bombed in the next five days. You better be careful. (Signed) Lunatic."

Phone Rate Held Lawful. Columbus, Oct. 6.—The rate of $8.50 a month for unified business telephone service in the Canton exchange area is the legal and lawful charge, according to a letter of the state public utilities commission to Mayor C. C. Curtis of Canton. The rate had been questioned by Canton subscribers, Mayor Curtis said.

Dies of Injuries. Ravenna, O., Oct. 6.—Mrs. Blanche Schwab, 55, who was struck by an automobile driven by Raymond Heller of Ravenna, died from her injuries in Ravenna hospital. She was on her way home with her husband when run down by the approaching car.

Professor Pitcher Dead. Cleveland, Oct. 6.—Dr. Arthur D. Pitcher, professor of mathematics at Western Reserve university for the last eight years, dropped dead of heart disease at his home here. DEVELOPMENTS UPSET PROGRAM

German Cabinet Fated to Consist of Marionettes.

AMBITIOUS PLAN ABANDONED

Stresemann Fails to Obtain Support of Nationalists, Democrats and Socialists For Proposed Small Cabinet With Dictatorial Powers—Note From France Causes Consternation at German Capital.

Berlin, Oct. 6.—It is more than ever apparent that any new German cabinet is fated to consist of marionettes whose strings will be pulled simultaneously by a half dozen managers who hate each other.

The result is interesting, but not edifying and not helpful. The Stresemann coalition, which was dissolved Wednesday to make room for a stronger combination, is now expected to return unchanged with the exception of two members. Herr Schacht, director of the Darmstadter bank, will probably succeed Finance Minister Hilferding, and Dr. Rabethge will succeed Minister of Economics Von Raumer. Neither of the new men is a member of any political party. Dr. Rabethge is a personal friend of President Ebert.

The sudden abandonment of the courageous plan to jettison the Socialists and send the reichstag home was destroyed by both domestic and foreign developments. A note was received from Premier Poincare in which he referred to the "black reichswehr," and declared that obviously Germany is not sufficiently disarmed, and demanded further disarmament. The foreign office refuses to give out the details, but the report caused consternation in the reichstag and proved a strong factor against the possibility of a dictatorship.

The proposed program was further rendered impossible when both the German Nationalists and Socialists announced they would refuse to support such a dictatorship law for a small cabinet. The Democrats also announced they would oppose the proposed plan unless another attempt was first made to re-establish the coalition. The Rhineland labor unions brought additional pressure to bear by telegraphing their delegates to oppose a right dictatorship.

The reichstag will be asked to pass a dictatorship law for the coalition cabinet. There is little expectation anywhere, however, that this will be more than a makeshift and likely will not be long lived.

EUROPE WILL RECOVER

Opinion of Lloyd George Who Delivers Speech in New York.

New York, Oct. 6.—Acclaimed by thousands, David Lloyd George, Britain's war premier, set foot upon American soil with a message of gratitude for this nation's contribution to the cause of liberty and a plea for unity of action among the democracies of the world to preserve peace.

In two speeches, one at city hall, where a formal welcome was extended by Acting Mayor Hulbert, and the second at a luncheon tendered him at the Biltmore, Lloyd George urged America to teach Europe how to attain that liberty and democracy, which, he declared, have made this nation great.

The league of nations he discarded as an instrument of peace, declaring it had failed in the Italo-Grecian dispute. Europe is in a desperate condition, he said, but will recover, adding: "I believe the clouds will clear away. I believe the skies will become clear, and that Europe and America will yet stand hand in hand."

The former premier sailed up the Hudson today on his way to Montreal.

Physicians Called in Webb Case. New York, Oct. 6.—District Attorney Rowland of Westchester county issued subpoenas of summonses for every medical man who attended Mrs. Webb for two months before her death and every expert who took part in the careful autopsy in Yonkers. They will appear before the grand jury. Dr. A. O. Gettler has completed his chemical analysis and his report will be presented Monday to the grand jury. Whether the poison found by Gettler was the "final push" that caused Mrs. Gertrude Gorman Webb to die at 7:04 o'clock on the night of Sept. 25 in her suite in the fashionable club, or whether the poison acted slowly and was given to her weeks before her death is to be determined by the grand jury.

B. & L. LEAGUE TO MEET

Men of Prominence Will Be Heard at the Columbus Convention.

Columbus, Oct. 6.—The thirty-fifth annual convention of the Ohio Building Association league, comprising more than 500 building, loan and savings associations, will be held in Columbus, Oct. 16, 17 and 18, according to an announcement today by James A. Devine, secretary of the organization.

Speakers will include United States Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York, O. E. Fradette, Chicago, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; John M. Gries of the federal department of commerce; Cyrus M. Locher, Columbus, director of the department of commerce of Ohio; J. W. Tannehill, superintendent of building and loan associations of Ohio, and C. A. Dyer of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

The ladies' auxiliary of the Ohio Building Association league will hold their third annual convention in connection with the meeting of the men's organization. Speakers at the women's session will include Judge Florence Allen of the supreme court of Ohio, Maude Murray Miller, Columbus, and Mrs. L. M. Studevant of Sidney.

Lad Loses Leg. Zanesville, O., Oct. 6.—Ralph Frash, 10, of Roseville, had his right leg amputated at the hip at a local hospital. The lad was injured in an automobile accident several days ago.

RIOTING IN MANILA

Filipino Faction Attacks Collectivists and Anti-Wood Leaders.

Manila, Oct. 6.—Following a mass meeting at the Olympic stadium, attended by 15,000 Democrats, thousands of the latter marched to the home of Senor Sumulong, their leader, assaulting en route the Carambola club, where Manuel Quezon, collectivists and anti-Wood leaders, were dining, with shouts of "Death to Quezon." Manuel Nieto, Quezon's secretary, was injured by a blow on the head during the rioting. The crowd also assaulted the National university and an automobile carrying President Osias of the university and Senor Soriano. Timely intervention of the constabulary and police prevented more serious rioting against the coalitionists. The meeting of Democrats passed a resolution pledging a boycott of all pro-Quezon papers. Marciano Rodil, collectivists leader from Samal, who was shot during an election riot, is dead.

Larry's Big Mistake

By AUSTIN FLEET
(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

IT WAS a long cry to the days when Larry was a crook. He lived with his wife and little son in an old brick house in the suburbs and earned a respectable living as a truckster. Also his mother-in-law, whom he detested, boarded with him and contributed substantially to the family income. His mother-in-law was supposed to be rich; nobody knew how much she had, but by the way she dominated the house she ought to have been a millionaire.

It was a two-family house. The other part was occupied by an old female miser. Oh, they were a pretty pair, the miseress and the mother-in-law. And, being much of a muchness, they were as thick as two thieves together.

Larry had fallen on evil days. He was sick of the whole business. He wanted to get out, but Mrs. Larry wouldn't leave her mother.

"Don't be silly, Larry," she said. "Ma isn't strong, and she may croak any day, and nobody knows how much that woman's worth. It may be millions."

Larry grunted. Privately he was resolved to beat it, mother-in-law or no, and then present an ultimatum to his wife to follow or not, as she pleased.

Then came the great discovery. The cellar of the house was common property. Under the cement, cunningly concealed, Larry came upon a box.

He opened it. It was full of jewelry, which his practiced eye assessed at once as worth four or five thousand dollars.

It belonged to the old miser. No doubt of that. Also the box hadn't been opened for months. Larry could see that.

He did not hesitate a minute. What use was it to the old woman, when, in Larry's hands, it meant freedom from mother-in-law?

Without a qualm he quietly abstracted the contents. In his first spare time he took the stuff to Isaacs, the fence.

"Thought you was out of the business, Larry?" Isaacs grinned.

"Well, I come back," said Larry. "That stuff's worth five thousand if it's worth a bean."

Isaacs inspected it. "Give you eight hundred, Larry," he said.

"Say, what you giving me! Two thousand!"

"Mebbe I'd make it nine," said Isaacs meditatively.

"Fifteen hundred or I take it away," said Larry.

They compromised on a thousand, which was paid over on the nail, and Larry climbed aboard his truck and went about his business, conscious of the huge wad in his hip pocket.

He had never felt so pleased with himself. If the old miser ever went to look at her hoard, it might not be for months, and meanwhile Larry could have made good his escape. A thousand dollars would furnish them in style with a fine apartment in another part of the town, and—there need be no more mother-in-law.

Yes, he reflected, he would certainly have to present Milly with an ultimatum about mother-in-law. And it was unfortunate that the old woman was so thick with the miseress downstairs. When Larry was gone and the discovery was made, suspicion might point to him.

Still, nothing could be proved. And any fears that Larry had were removed by the feeling of that wad in his hip-pocket.

He made his way home rejoicing, the ultimatum already framed. Milly met him at the door in tears.

"Larry," she sobbed, "Larry, mother's had a stroke."

Concealing his glee, Larry went upstairs. The old lady was lying on the bed, breathing heavily. Beside her stood the doctor. He turned to answer Larry's unspoken question.

"I'm afraid there's not much hope for her," he said.

And that was a true prophecy, for five days later the old lady died.

The will was read. The vindictive old woman had left all her property to her other daughter, "on account of my daughter Milly having married beneath her and disgraced the family name." Milly's sole legacy consisted of "my valuable jewelry, being a diamond pendant, two emerald bracelets, a pearl necklace . . . appraised at six thousand seven hundred dollars."

"Where can it be, Larry?" demanded Milly. "It isn't in the bank—it isn't—oh, it seems to have been a delusion of mother's. I remember those things when I was a girl, but she must have sold them—what's the matter, Larry?"

"Aw, nothing," grunted Larry. "I guess that's part of the old cat's revenge. Fergit it!"

GAME LOST

Wilmington Won From Circleville High by Score of 38 to 0.

Wilmington won the football game Friday from Circleville at Wilmington by the score of 38 to 0.

The score does not indicate how good the game was, as Circleville was heavily outweighed. In the first half Circleville's captain won the toss, Circleville failed to gain and punted, Wilmington plunged the line and made several downs and then made touchdown and kicked goal.

Wilmington kicked off to Circleville. The latter failed to gain and punted to Wilmington which then plunged the line again for touchdown. Wilmington kicked goal.

Circleville chose to receive and failing to gain, punted and the kick was blocked and recovered by Wilmington and continued line plunge and then went over with a forward pass and made goal, score 21 to 0.

In the second half Circleville kicked off to Wilmington who made a long end run. Even Merriman, Circleville's quarterback, was knocked unconscious in making a flying tackle and was replaced by Jack Valentine.

Circleville held for downs, Wilmington continued line plunging for touchdown and failed to make goal. Wilmington then kicked off to Circleville and ran it back to the 50 yard line and forced to punt, Wilmington got the ball and continued the time plunging for two more touchdowns before the whistle blew score 17 to 0; final score 38 to 0.

Steele, Merriman and Mason starred for Circleville; Bonecutter and Scott for Wilmington. Due to the difference in weight straight football was adhered to thruout the game.

The line-up:

Right end D. Steel
Right tackle Weller
Right guard Turner
Left guard Dearth
Center Robinson
Quarter Merriman
Right half A. Steele

AMUSEMENTS

How many elements of characterization are necessary to a successful motion picture? In William de Mille's Paramount production of "Grumpy," which comes to the Met theater next Monday every essential is made use of. The cast carries on the story in a most pleasing fashion.

"Grumpy" for example, played by Theodore Roberts, one of the featured players, is a lovable, peculiar old character whose keen brain and quick wit saves every situation and who approves heartily of

Conrad Nagel, who enacts the role of Ernest Heron, a featured part, a clean-cut, pleasing young man who is entrusted with the $500,000 diamond. Ernest is in love with

May McAvoy (featured with Roberts and Nagel in her role of Virginia Bullivant, daughter of "Grumpy") May is sweet and winsome at the age when romance rules her woman's heart. She is, therefore, divided between Ernest and Jarvis (played by Casson Ferguson) who is at heart a villain and seeks to marry Virginia for her money. Jarvis attempts to get the diamond, in fact, does get it and tries to sell it.

Wolfe, one of England's worst fence for buying stolen jewels (played by Charles French. But Wolfe stays off.

Other characters in the story who lend to the mystery, to the comedy, the romance, thrills and the general plot are Susan, the maid played by Bernice Frank and the parts of Kehle Duddock and Dawson, played respectively by Bertram Johns, Charles Ogle and Robert Bolder.

Galleon.

The galleon was originally a warship of three or four gun-decks. The name was subsequently applied to the Spanish treasure-ships which brought from the Spanish possessions in Mexico and South America gold and silver and other wealth to Spain. They were large, unwieldy vessels, and were eagerly sought after as prizes during the times of war on account of the immense wealth they contained.

Caddy Miller has the swellest line of Stetson Hats he ever showed. Call in and look them over.

Final Summons.

Death came suddenly to Miss Mary R. Thompson on Saturday morning at 3:15 o'clock. She had been in ill health for several years and her death was the result of a complication of diseases.

Mary R. Thompson was born in Circleville, October 14, 1863 and was the daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Thompson.

She leaves two sisters, Misses Fannie and Anna Thompson, and one brother, William G. Thompson, of this city.

The funeral service will be held at the home on 147 West Mound street on Tuesday morning at ten o'clock. Rev. Floyd E. Logee will conduct the service and burial will be in Forest cemetery.

GOOD ADVICE.

All that Circleville needs to start an industrial revival is for its citizens to forget self and join hands in a whole hearted movement in bolstering up industry.

If each person will forget petty personal jealousy, stop knocking and begin to boost in an effective manner the city can easily double its population in five years at the same time doubling the value of every foot of property in the city. Boost, don't knock.

James J. Hinde.

City Was Impregnable.

The ancient city of Nineveh was eight miles wide and fourteen miles long was surrounded by a wall 100 feet in height and so wide three chariots could be driven abreast on its top.

Symbols Had Meaning.

The shoes and sandals of the Greeks, Romans, Egyptians and Jews were ornamented with horns, crescents and other representations of the moon. At marriage ceremonies the custom of casting the shoe was combined with the throwing of flowers and various kinds of grain. These symbols and offerings seem to indicate the propitiation of a god, probably the deity who presided over productivity.

The great industry James J. Hinde built at Sandusky and other cities, prospered because of liberal wages.

This is the experience of a modern prodigal—who came back. It is the story of a mother and her boy.

But, above all, it is the story of a mother's prayers, as first she gave it to me, and then her son.

Jack Norton entered college a clean-cut, upright boy, but returned home with a varied knowledge of poker playing and other worldly accomplishments.

His father's ambition had been to add the words, "And Son" to the partnership sign over at the paint factory but he had started forty years ago in the room, and he had confidently expected Jack to become one of the old business men of the community.

The boy's family, and a girl in the next block by the name of Mary Bradford who had had Jack's picture on the bureau in her bed room ever since the summer before he went away to college, had the same idea about his business career. But he promptly showed them all that he had other plans.

"This is no place for me," he confided to his father. "I'm going to New York, where a man of my talents has a proper chance. I think I'll be an architect. So if you'll let me have that is coming to me I'll use it to start at my new career. Take it from me—before long you won't know your son!"

His father glanced at Jack's college-boy hat, and rainbow shirt and white trousers, flitting with a lavender expanse of silk socks and shook his head, but he finally gave in and drew a check for ten thousand dollars to start his son and heir in the battle with the world.

His mother stole upstairs to her own private little nook and when she came down she timidly held out a faded, old fashioned Bible, with a book mark that she had embroidered when she was a girl.

"It has been mine since I was a child," she said. "When you read it remember your mother at home is saying that her boy will make the best, and bravest, and biggest man in the whole world."

Jack smiled patronizingly. "She is bit out of date," he said to himself, and hadn't had the chance to see life at I have and know that people who count to anything have outgrown at no sense—but I may as well humor her."

So he slipped the Bible into the bottom of his trunk, where it would be out of sight, waved his hand to the folks on the porch and swung out of the front gate.

Dick Randolph, a former college um, soon initiated Jack into the life of the city. He was soon hopelessly infatuated with a soubrette named Flossie Brandon and was in high favor while his money lasted.

Letters continued to come to him regularly with the Homeburg post mark, altho he seldom bothered to answer them now. He didn't have to. A mother has an extra sense—where her boy is concerned. God gave her an especial wireless telegraphy for her own exclusive use.

His mother added always to her letters the words, "You will know that I am praying for you, every night at eight o'clock, winter or summer." She never forgot to write that postscript. It was a part of her life.

One evening Jack entertained at a dinner in his apartment.

It was Flossie Brandon who found his mother's frayed Bible, that she discovered on the bottom shelf in a stand in the corner. Jack faced the crowd with a flushed, embarrassed face, as the girl held it up and called the attention of the others to her find. As he stared at it, the door of the cuckoo clock in the corner opened. One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight times came the shrill note of the toy bird. Eight o'clock.

It might have been a coincidence, of course. But Jack Norton doesn't think so—now.

Suddenly thru the frayed cover of the Bible he seemed to catch a vision, his mother in her room at home on her knees and the postscripts of her letters flashed back to him:—"At eight o'clock every evening I shall be praying for you." The next moment he swept the vision from him and laughed as he pointed to the Bible.

"Oh, that's a relief. Quite a curiosity, isn't it?" he stammered.

"And whose picture is this, may I ask?" demanded Flossie coldly, stopping before a photograph of Mary Bradford on the wall.

Jack flushed.

"Oh, that's another relic!" he laughed again.

But Jack's money could not last forever and next we find him robbing the safe of his employers.

Jack was twirling the last of the tumblers of the safe when a low, whirling sound back of him made him jump with a face like a sheet. But it was only the office clock preparing to strike.

One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight!

Jack stared at the safe like a man suddenly paralyzed.

It could not be coincidence again—and yet it must be! Jack pushed his hand over his face. It was dripping with perspiration. Perhaps you can find a satisfactory explanation. Jack has ceased to try.

Burning his brain, as he stood there were the words of his mother's letters, "Remember, every evening at eight o'clock I shall be praying for you—winter or summer.

When he returned to his rooms he found that he had stolen two thousand dollars.

The next morning the head of the firm had him on the carpet with the rest of the staff. Jack didn't like the look in his eyes but he told himself it was impossible to connect him with the robbery.

A week later he was called into the private office again.

"You're thru, Norton," his employer said. "You can get your time on your way out."

With money and position gone, Jack appealed to Dick, his chum, and was rudely turned down. Of course, Flossie Brandon also promptly spurned his further advances.

He thought that he was a very much deceived and wronged young man, and he hired all of the bartenders he could find to help him forget his troubles.

At the end of the month he found himself a besotted bum, in a park with a revolver, with which he meant to end it all.

He was raising the weapon to his head when a voice checked him.

It was that of a girl on the street corner, singing to the accompaniment of a bass drum and a cornet.

The revolver fell to his side.

The girl reached the song's concluding verse:

He turned my darkness into light, This blessed Christ of Calvary, I'll praise His name both day and night, That mother's prayers have followed me."

As the words died away, she turned toward the doors of a corner mission hall.

Jack slouched after the two men with her who were carrying the bass drum and the cornet.

He dropped onto a pine bench in the rear of the mission hall and fumbled with his hat.

An aisle in the center led up to a platform, on which stood a man with a beaming smile, that seemed to take in everybody in the hall.

Jack's eyes fixed themselves suddenly on a clock on the wall over the man's head. Its hands pointed exactly to eight.

He tried to remember something that kept slipping away from him and then like a flash it came to him, the forgotten postscripts of his mother's letters—"Remember, I shall always be praying for you at eight o'clock—winter or summer."

Coincidence a third time? Or mental telepathy? Or the spirit of God? Jack gives the facts. He can't give the reason for them.

All he knows was that he was staggering to his feet, and stumbling down the aisle.

Suddenly the mist faded from the picture of his mother that had been dancing in the air before him. He saw her face distinctly now, as distinctly as tho she were in the room with him. And thru her tears she was smiling. At the platform he dropped to his knees weakly.

The man on the platform reached over, and gave him a thump on the shoulders and led him to a front bench.

After the service he sat down at his side. He didn't ask questions. He was too good a judge of human nature. Before Jack knew it he was giving the other the story of his life.

"God hasn't any use for a man with a skeleton in his closet or for a quitter," said the superintendent when the boy had finished. "You can't get right with God unless you're right with men. You must go back to your firm and tell them it was you who robbed their safe."

The next afternoon the ex-Broadway kid and the superintendent of the mission were ushered into the private office of Jack's former employer.

There was a queer taste in the boy's mouth and a queer light in his eyes, but he faced the head of the firm without a quiver and told his story.

"Is it the penitentiary?" he asked when he had finished.

His employer looked at his desk for a moment in silence.

"I've got to do my duty!" he said grimly, and pushed a button before him.

Jack caught his breath. Above him he saw again the picture of his mother on her knees and he closed his eyes to blot it out. If they could only keep it from her!

"Go to it!" he said huskily. "I'm ready!"

Behind him the door opened. It must be the detectives. For an instant he stood rigid and then, without turning he held his wrists out behind him for the handcuffs.

But it was not the grip of steel that caught them. It was something soft, and moist and warm. With a gasp he whirled. It was his mother's hands.

And behind her stood his father. It was his father who spoke first.

"We've come to take you home," he said. "We need a new firm sign at the old factory!"

Jack stared dumbly. The room was whirling over his head.

"But what about the money I owe here, the money I stole!" he stammered

"I'll pay it back, son, and give you a chance to work it out for me! If you tell me the prodigal has learned his lesson we'll all try to forget it! What do you say?"

A month later, in the dusk of a summer evening, Jack stole up on the porch of the old home cottage, sweet with the scent of honeysuckle and lilacs. He was holding the hand of a girl beside him, a girl with shining eyes.

His mother rose from her easy chair and dropped her knitting.

"I've brought you home a new daughter," he said; "Mary Bradford has promised to take a chance with me, in spite of the past!"

A few minutes afterward he pulled Mary across to the piano.

"Play for me," he begged.

"What shall it be?" she asked.

"My favorite song, of course!" And he added softly, "The song that brought me back to myself and to you and to God."

The girl smiled and her hands ran lightly over the keys, as thru the room, there floated the strains of "My Mother's Prayers Have Followed Me!"

Being required to give an account of the patriarch Abraham, a youngster wrote: "Abraham was the father of Lot and two wives. One was called Ishmale and the other Hagar. Most Troublesome Pest in Orchards
Oyster-Shell Scale Attacks Apple and Other Fruit Trees.

The commonest, most wide spread and best-known scale insect in the United States attacking not only apple and other orchard trees but about 30 different kinds of shade trees, is the oyster-shell scale, so called because the form of the adult female scale is not unlike that of an oyster shell.
Life History of Scale.
The life history of the oyster-shell scale may be used as an illustration for the whole group. The insects pass the winter as eggs under the old female scales, these eggs having been laid the preceding fall. The eggs are very tiny, white, and vary from 30 to 100 in number. In the spring from middle May to middle June, these eggs hatch into young scale insects. The newly hatched young scales are tiny, six-legged, active creatures. Soon after hatching they leave the old mother scale and wander away in search of the new and tender growths of the tree.
They may spread not only by crawling, but by being carried on the bodies of insects or feet of birds. When they have finally settled down they insert their beaks into the tree and begin drawing out sap. They soon lose their legs and antennae and their bodies become covered with white, waxy fibers. These fibers soon mat down to form the scale covering. As the insect grows the scale gradually assumes its characteristic oyster-shell shape, within which the legless, eyeless insect is to be found.
Change into Flies.
The male scale insects start out like the female scale insects, but when they have formed a scale and made partial growth they change into tiny winged flies which emerge from under the scales.
The control of scale insects of all kinds is chiefly by spraying, and this operation may be carried on at two entirely different periods of the year and for two entirely different purposes. In one case the spraying is done when the trees are not in foliage, that is, in the late autumn or early spring, and these sprays are known as dormant sprays because of the dormant condition of the trees.

Good Sires Increase
Herd Production Rapidly
Further proof of the manner in which a promising dairy herd may be built up by using pure bred dairy bulls on common cows is afforded by the results of a several years' breeding experiment conducted at the South Dakota experiment station. The foundation cows of the experiment represented a blending of Hereford and Shorthorn blood, each cow being sired by a pure bred beef bull and out of a grade cow. Each of the foundation cows was bred repeatedly to the dairy herd bulls in the station herd and the heifers were retained and bred to the dairy bulls, thus producing second generation crosses which had 75 per cent dairy blood. Milk and butterfat records were kept for each lactation period of the grade foundation cows and their graded-up offspring.
The average yearly production of the grade beef cows was found to be 4,155 pounds of milk and 170 pounds of butterfat. The first generation heifers produced by these cows to the service of pure bred dairy sires made records averaging 6,707 pounds of milk and 290 pounds of fat. The first cross of dairy blood therefore brought an increase of 2,552 pounds of milk and 90 pounds of butterfat in each heifer's yearly production. Expressed in per cent, the first cross heifers produced 61 per cent more milk and 52 per cent more butterfat than their dams.

Wheat Is Excellent Feed for Chicks and Layers
Wheat is a good feed for young chickens and laying hens and may be fed with profit when the price is low, says D. C. Kennard, associate in animal industry, Ohio experiment station.
The grain mixture may be of equal parts of corn and wheat, and the mash of 4 parts ground corn, 4 of medium ground wheat, and 2 of high-grade meat scraps or tankage.
If it is desired to use oats, the mixture suggested is corn 4, wheat 4, and oats 2 parts, and a mash of ground corn 3 parts, medium ground wheat 3, finely-ground oats 2 and meat scraps or tankage 2 parts.
Any change of feed for laying hens should be made gradually, it was pointed out, as a sudden change may seriously affect egg production.

Thunderstorm Doesn't Sour Cream, Says Iowa
Folks who are trying to deliver sweet cream to their creameries complain now and then that thunderstorms sour the cream.
The dairy department at Iowa State college says that a thunderstorm will have no effect on cream that is properly kept at a low temperature. For example, if milk and cream are kept in cans in a cooling tank through which flows all water pumped for the live stock, a thunderstorm will not affect either of them. The installation of such a cooling tank is not difficult nor very expensive and it will make possible added income from the dairy herd through a better price for sweet cream.

Christ of Andes.
In 1902 Chile and the Argentine made an unconditional treaty of arbitration and agreed to disarm part of their ships and troops. The agreement was for five years, but it has been continued since. Before that the countries were on the verge of war. To commemorate the peace a colossal figure of Christ was cast from the guns of the dismantled frontier fortress. It stands 13,000 feet above the sea on the frontier between the two countries, one hand stretched in blessing, the other holding a cross.

Father and Son.
Burt Wappel, who was in two of the events for his school, came home from the relay races the other night all tired out. He complained to his father about it. "You do have a hard time of it," Eck Wappel admitted. "When I was your age I was in every event scheduled for my father's farm. There were 14 or 15 every day in the week."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

PALESTINE

Story Told by One Who Knows It Best—
Travelogue Entertainment.

An American citizen made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land recently, but it was made under different circumstances than the usual tour of Palestine, for this American was going home, home to the land of his birth.
In his boyhood he had tended his father's flocks on the hills around the Sea of Galilee. He had come to America where by dint of his own hard work he had graduated from an American university. And he returned to the land of his fathers, the Holy Land of all Christendom.

That man was Stephen A. Haboush, author, lecturer and traveler. And in his pilgrimage back to the land of his birth he saw Palestine with native eyes and with the eyes of an American citizen. He brought back to America, with him, a marvelous moving picture
of Palestine life and customs, thrilling scenes of the Holy places of antiquity. He brought back to the land of his adoption the real story of Palestine as it was and is, a true interpretation of the Bible story in the light of people and places which have not changed these two thousand years.

Stephen A. Haboush knows Palestine as most Americans never can know it, because it is his native land.
He knows it, too, as an American, because he is an American himself, an American by choice and adoption.

People of Circleville will be privileged to hear Stephen A. Haboush
next Sunday night at the Methodist church on "Over the Hills of Galilee"
and on Monday night his travelogue
entertainment.

He is bringing to Circleville the true story of Palestine told by one who knows it best. He brings his motion pictures of places and scenes
that are inaccessible to Europeans.
His travelogue promises to be a treat.
It is something different, the like of which does not exist. The public is invited.

CALL FOR SPECIAL SESSION ISSUED

Oklahoma Solons Will Attempt to Impeach Governor.

TO CONVENE ON OCTOBER 17

Call Based on the Legal Presumption That Initiative Petition No. 79 Became a Law Tuesday Evening and That Certification of the Election to the State Secretary is Not Necessary—Strategy of Walton's Foes.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 6.—Impeachment of Governor J. C. Walton will be attempted by the Oklahoma legislature Oct. 17.

A call for a special session of the legislature on that date was issued by W. D. McBee, a member of the house of representatives from Stephens county.

The call was promulgated almost immediately upon an apparent pre-arranged influx of mail and telegraphic requests for the session from more than a majority of the members of the house and was based upon the legal presumption that at 7 o'clock last Tuesday evening initiative petition No. 79, which permits a legislative majority to summon an investigating and impeachment sessions without gubernatorial authority, became a definite law and that neither certification of the election by the state election board nor any other procedure was necessary. The text of the call is carefully drawn, in strict conformity to law.

The governor is not named in the call, which states the legislature is called to meet at noon, October 17, "for the purpose of investigating the commission of impeachable offenses by officers of the state subject to impeachment, as provided in article 8 of the constitution of Oklahoma."

The political strategy of the ready acquiescence in the continuance of Governor Walton's suit to restrain the state election board from certifying Tuesday's election to the secretary of state became manifest in this latest action. It now appears, according to legal interpretation of the election statutes, that Tuesday's election, particularly that part of it applying to initiative petition No. 79, does not have to be certified to the state secretary, nor is its certification to anybody else absolutely essential, yet the governor's opponents gave the impression that they were being restrained from acting, whereas in reality, they were secretly making preparations for the special legislative call, which was mailed before any inkling of it reached outside the "rebel circle."

W. C. McAllister, secretary of the state election board, said certification of the election was unnecessary to make it legal.

PAL MORAN WINS

Scores Technical Knockout in His Bout With Charlie White.

New York, Oct. 6.—Fighting the greatest fight of his long career, Pal Moran of New Orleans put the championship aspirations of Charlie White of Chicago to rout at Madison Square Garden, when in the fourteenth round of the scheduled 15 round fight the New York boxing commission physicians ordered the fight stopped. When the doctors intervened White was stretched out on the canvas with blood spurting from his nose and mouth and Patsy Haley, the referee, had reached the count of eight over his prostrate form.

The fight between the two lightweights, which was for the chance of meeting Benny Leonard for the championship, was one of the most spectacular ever staged in New York City. Starting out slow and uninteresting it wound up in a blaze of glory with Pal Moran staging one of the greatest comebacks ever seen in a local ring. Practically out on his feet at the end of the eleventh round Pal came back and hammered White all over the ring.

Klan Abandons Activities.

Ironton, O., Oct. 6.—The Ku Klux Klan has abandoned its activities here, according to a statement by S. F. Moore, organizer. Lack of interest, he said, due to newspaper attacks, caused the order for cessation of activities by the state organization.

Carrie Clark, 3, months old, was killed in New York by a brick which fell from the eleventh floor of a new building and through the top of an auto in which the child lay.

REFUSES CRABBE'S REQUEST

Donahey Charges "Cheap Politics" in the McNamara Case.

Columbus, Oct. 6.—Refusal of Governor Donahey to act on charges filed against Assistant Welfare Director John McNamara, Sr., pertaining to alleged misconduct under two former state administrations, may end the controversy, insofar as Attorney General Crabbe is concerned. This was indicated by the attorney general after receiving Governor Donahey's reply to his letter reiterating a demand that the McNamara charges be investigated.

Governor Donahey's letter to the attorney general contained a rebuke for the latter's insistence in pressing the demand for an investigation. Crabbe's interest in the affairs of the Girls' Industrial school is merely "cheap politics," the governor declared. He denied that McNamara has been identified with the management of the institution since the removal of Mrs. Mae E. Stannard as chief matron last June and told the attorney general that he "should know and probably does know that Mr. McNamara has had no connection with the school, it being in charge of Miss Pangborn, as acting matron."

CONFLICT WITH FINLAND LOOMS

Action By Russia Apprehended at Washington.

MAY INVOLVE BALTIC STATES

Finland Refuses Compliance With Russia's Demands For Satisfaction For the Killing of Two Soviet Officials by Finns, Strongly Denying Guilty Knowledge of the Assassinations—Poland's Position.

Washington, Oct. 6.—War clouds are gathering over eastern Europe, which may involve Russia in conflict with the Baltic states, advices received by the state department and Finnish legation indicate.

Hard upon the heels of the department's announcement that a new ultimatum was delivered to Finland by Russia, demanding satisfaction for the murder of two Soviet officials, came the statement from the legation that the foreign office replied to the Russian communication, refusing compliance with its demands.

The Russian government's note recalled the recent murder of the two Soviet members of the Karelian boundary commission, Lavroff and Leshnev, declared they were killed by Finns, and announced the Finnish government would be held responsible for their deaths. The demands included appointment of a mixed commission to investigate the assassinations, punishment of the assassins in accordance with Russian law and the deposit of 1,500,000 gold marks by Finland to guarantee the indemnification of the families of the dead men. CPbit x . . . said . . . calYsaHS . . . fh Finnish Foreign Minister Vennola's reply denies guilty knowledge of the assassinations, refuses to accept responsibility for them, and refuses compliance with the Russian demands.

Officials here view the situation with considerable concern. Finland, they say, already has shown sufficient strength to win her independence from Russia, and since then has contracted an alliance with the "Baltic triplets," Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Should Russia attack Finland, officials say, it is probable that her three Baltic allies would align themselves with her at once, and there is the further chance that Poland would do likewise, as Warsaw would view with disquiet eyes any encroachment by Moscow upon the Polish corridor to the Baltic. Russia admittedly has one of the most powerful and best equipped armies in Europe.

CLAIMS HE BOUGHT FREEDOM FROM WIFE

Canton Man Charged With Child Abandonment.

Canton, O., Oct. 6.—John Bankhurst, arrested in Chicago, was brought back here to face a charge of child abandonment, threatened by his wife.

Bankhurst protested that he had bought his freedom from his wife in this city for $4,000 and that she had not "played fair." The woman for whom he said he purchased his freedom, a former English Red Cross nurse, declared she would follow him back to Canton to "see that justice is done." She has a two-year-old child.

The former nurse said she met Bankhurst, formerly a public accountant, in Salem, O. She had come to America after the armistice and was a nurse in a hospital for former soldiers, she explained. "We fell in love," she said. "John went to Mrs. Bankhurst and told her about it. The three of us discussed it frankly and finally she agreed that if he would pay her $4,000 and go out of her life in a quiet way she would make no trouble."

They went to Cleveland, she continued, and believing that the wife had carried out her agreement to get a divorce, they had a marriage ceremony and later went to Chicago. Last April, she said, they learned no divorce had been granted and they then had their marriage annulled.

Delegates to the American Oil Men's association predicted price of gasoline will increase during the winter and spring.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Addition to Capitol Proposed.

Columbus, Oct. 6.—Ohio's proposed new state office building may take the form of additions to the present state house annex building, or some other additional structure on the present state house grounds, it was indicated by a member of the state office building commission. One proposal is to build wings on the north and south fronts of the annex, which is located just east of the original capitol building. Another suggestion is to add a structure directly east of the annex on the vacant section facing Third street.

Kills Wife's Betrayer.

Elyria, O., Oct. 6.—Mack Manning, 28, colored, ridged the body of Richard Atwood, 29, also colored with bullets when the two met at Lorain. Manning is held on a murder charge. Manning charges that the slain man eloped with his wife from Gary, Ind. and in a quarrel at Sandusky a few days ago, Atwood slashed Mrs. Manning five times, took $63 from her and fled.

No Action on McGannon's Request.

Columbus, Oct. 6.—Application for parole from Ohio penitentiary of Judge William H. McGannon, former municipal court judge at Cleveland, was continued indefinitely by the board of clemency, subject to call of the board. McGannon, serving a term for perjury, has applied for parole several times and his case was recently continued to the October meeting of the board.

Received Threatening Letter.

Toledo, Oct. 6.—Mrs. F. S. Doyle, widow of the late Judge John H. Doyle, has left her home and police are guarding the dwelling as the result of her receipt of a threatening letter. The note read: "Your home will be bombed in the next five days. You better be careful. (Signed) Lunatic."

Phone Rate Held Lawful.

Columbus, Oct. 6.—The rate of $3.50 a month for unified business telephone service in the Canton exchange area is the legal and lawful charge, according to a letter of the state public utilities commission to Mayor C. C. Curtis of Canton. The rate had been questioned by Canton subscribers, Mayor Curtis said.

Dies of Injuries.

Ravenna, O., Oct. 6.—Mrs. Blanche Schwab, 55, who was struck by an automobile driven by Raymond Heller of Ravenna, died from her injuries in Ravenna hospital. She was on her way home with her husband when run down by the approaching car.

Professor Pitcher Dead.

Cleveland, Oct. 6.—Dr. Arthur D. Pitcher, professor of mathematics at Western Reserve university for the last eight years, dropped dead of heart disease at his home here. He taught at the University of Chicago in 1910 and Dartmouth college in 1911. He is survived by his widow and son.

DEVELOPMENTS UPSET PROGRAM

German Cabinet Fated to Consist of Marionettes.

AMBITIOUS PLAN ABANDONED

Stresemann Fails to Obtain Support of Nationalists, Democrats and Socialists For Proposed Small Cabinet With Dictatorial Powers—Note From France Causes Consternation at German Capital.

Berlin, Oct. 6.—It is more than ever apparent that any new German cabinet is fated to consist of marionettes whose strings will be pulled simultaneously by a half dozen managers who hate each other.

The result is interesting, but not edifying and not helpful. The Stresemann coalition, which was dissolved Wednesday to make room for a stronger combination, is now expected to return unchanged with the exception of two members. Herr Schacht, director of the Darmstaedter bank, will probably succeed Finance Minister Hilferding, and Dr. Rabenhoeft will succeed Minister of Economics von Raumer. Neither of the new men is a member of any political party. Dr. Rabenhoeft is a personal friend of President Ebert.

The sudden abandonment of the courageous plan to jettison the Socialists and send the reichstag home was destroyed by both domestic and foreign developments. A note was received from Premier Poincare in which he referred to the "black reichswehr," and declared that obviously Germany is not sufficiently disarmed, and demanded further disarmament. The foreign office refuses to give out the details, but the report caused consternation in the reichstag and proved a strong factor against the possibility of a dictatorship.

The proposed program was further rendered impossible when both the German Nationalists and Socialists announced they would refuse to support such a dictatorship law for a small cabinet. The Democrats also announced they would oppose the proposed plan unless another attempt was first made to re-establish the coalition. The Rhineland labor unions brought additional pressure to bear by telegraphing their delegates to oppose a right dictatorship.

The reichstag will be asked to pass a dictatorship law for the coalition cabinet. There is little expectation anywhere, however, that this will be more than a makeshift and likely will not be long lived.

Opinion of Lloyd George Who Delivers Speech in New York.

New York, Oct. 6.—Acclaimed by thousands, David Lloyd George, Britain's war premier, set foot upon American soil with a message of gratitude for this nation's contribution to the cause of liberty and a plea for unity of action among the democracies of the world to preserve peace.

In two speeches, one at city hall, where a formal welcome was extended by Acting Mayor Hulbert, and the second at a luncheon tendered him at the Biltmore, Lloyd George urged America to teach Europe how to attain that liberty and democracy, which, he declared, have made this nation great.

The league of nations he discarded as an instrument of peace, declaring it had failed in the Italo-Grecian dispute. Europe is in a desperate condition, he said, but will recover, adding: "I believe the clouds will clear away. I believe the skies will become clear, and that Europe and America will yet stand hand in hand."

The former premier sailed up the Hudson today on his way to Montreal.

Physicians Called in Webb Case.

New York, Oct. 6.—District Attorney Rowland of Westchester county issued subpoenas of summonses for every medical man who attended Mrs. Webb for two months before her death and every expert who took part in the careful autopsy in Yonkers. They will appear before the grand jury. Dr. A. O. Gettler has completed his chemical analysis and his report will be presented Monday to the grand jury. Whether the poison found by Gettler was the "final push" that caused Mrs. Gettler, Gorman Webb to die at 7:04 o'clock on the night of Sept. 25 in her suite in the fashionable club, or whether the poison acted slowly and was given to her weeks before her death is to be determined by the grand jury.

B. & L. LEAGUE TO MEET

Men of Prominence Will Be Heard at the Columbus Convention.

Columbus, Oct. 6.—The thirty-fifth annual convention of the Ohio Building Association league, comprising more than 500 building, loan and savings associations, will be held in Columbus, Oct. 16, 17 and 18, according to an announcement today by James A. Devine, secretary of the organization.

Speakers will include United States Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York, O. E. Fradette, Chicago, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; John M. Gries of the federal department of commerce; Cyrus M. Locher, Columbus, director of the department of commerce of Ohio; J. W. Tannehill, superintendent of building and loan associations of Ohio, and C. A. Dyer of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

The ladies' auxiliary of the Ohio Building Association league will hold their third annual convention in connection with the meeting of the men's organization. Speakers at the women's session will include Judge Florence Allen of the supreme court of Ohio, Maude Murray Miller, Columbus, and Mrs. L. M. Studevant of Sidney.

Lad Loses Leg.

Zanesville, O., Oct. 6.—Ralph Frash, 10, of Roseville, had his right leg amputated at the hip at a local hospital. The lad was injured in an automobile accident several days ago.

RIOTING IN MANILA

Filipino Faction Attacks Collectivists and Anti-Wood Leaders.

Manila, Oct. 6.—Following a mass meeting at the Olympic stadium, attended by 15,000 Democrats, thousands of the latter marched to the home of Senor Sumulong, their leader, assaulting en route the Carambola club, where Manuel Quezon, collectivists and anti-Wood leaders, were dining, with shouts of "Death to Quezon." Manuel Nieto, Quezon's secretary, was injured by a blow on the head during the rioting. The crowd also assaulted the National university and an automobile carrying President Osias of the university and Senor Soriano. Timely intervention of the constabulary and police prevented more serious rioting against the coalitionists. The meeting of Democrats passed a resolution pledging a boycott of all pro-Quezon papers. Marcelino Rodil, collectivists leader from Samal, who was shot during an election riot, is dead.

NOW IS TIME TO HELP.
Now that the Hinde Paper Box company has selected the site for their new Container Plant, there is no longer any reason for our people withholding their support from the project. Fibre containers are used here in very large quantities. The city is badly in need of steady employment for its people. Let everyone subscribe as they can afford and help get the good work started.

Aldrich's Critic.
"As time went on," says Ferris Greenslet of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, "he was growing increasingly fastidious in the revision of his prose, and in the end he smoothed and filed it with the same loving, lingering care that he bestowed upon his poems. As he wrote in one of his letters: 'There is only one critic I stand greatly in dread of; he becomes keener and more exacting every month; he is getting to be a dreadful fellow for me, and his name is T. B. Aldrich. There is no let up.'"

Larry's Big Mistake

By AUSTIN FLEET

IT WAS a long cry to the days when Larry was a crook. He lived with his wife and little son in an old brick house in the suburbs and earned a respectable living as a truckster. Also his mother-in-law, whom he detested, boarded with him and contributed substantially to the family income. His mother-in-law was supposed to be rich; nobody knew how much she had, but by the way she dominated the house she ought to have been a millionaire.

It was a two-family house. The other part was occupied by an old female miser. Oh, they were a pretty pair, the miseress and the mother-in-law. And, being much of a muchness, they were as thick as two thieves together.

Larry had fallen on evil days. He was sick of the whole business. He wanted to get out, but Mrs. Larry wouldn't leave her mother.

"Don't be silly, Larry," she said. "Ma isn't strong, and she may croak any day, and nobody knows how much that woman's worth. It may be millions."

Larry grunted. Privately he was resolved to beat it, mother-in-law or no, and then present an ultimatum to his wife to follow or not, as she pleased.

Then came the great discovery. The cellar of the house was common property. Under the cement, cunningly concealed, Larry came upon a box.

He opened it. It was full of jewelry, which his practiced eye assessed at once as worth four or five thousand dollars.

It belonged to the old miser. No doubt of that. Also the box hadn't been opened for months. Larry could see that.

He did not hesitate a minute. What use was it to the old woman, when, in Larry's hands, it meant freedom from mother-in-law?

Without a qualm he quietly abstracted the contents. In his first spare time he took the stuff to Isaacs, the fence.

"Thought you was out of the business, Larry?" Isaacs grinned. "Well, I come back," said Larry. "That stuff's worth five thousand if it's worth a bean."

Isaacs inspected it. "Give you eight hundred, Larry," he said.

"Say, what you giving me! Two thousand!"

"Mebbe I'd make it nine," said Isaacs meditatively.

"Fifteen hundred or I take it away," said Larry.

They compromised on a thousand, which was paid over on the nail, and Larry climbed aboard his truck and went about his business, conscious of the huge wad in his hip pocket.

He had never felt so pleased with himself. If the old miser ever went to look at her hoard, it might not be for months, and meanwhile Larry could have made good his escape. A thousand dollars would furnish them in style with a fine apartment in another part of the town, and—there need be no more mother-in-law.

Yes, he reflected, he would certainly have to present Milly with an ultimatum about mother-in-law. And it was unfortunate that the old woman was so thick with the miseress downstairs. When Larry was gone and the discovery was made, suspicion might point to him.

Still, nothing could be proved. And any fears that Larry had were removed by the feeling of that wad in his hip-pocket.

He made his way home rejoicing, the ultimatum already framed. Milly met him at the door in tears.

"Larry," she sobbed, "Larry, mother's had a stroke."

Concealing his glee, Larry went upstairs. The old lady was lying on the bed, breathing heavily. Beside her stood the doctor. He turned to answer Larry's unspoken question.

"I'm afraid there's not much hope for her," he said.

And that was a true prophecy, for five days later the old lady died.

The will was read. The vindictive old woman had left all her property to her other daughter, "on account of my daughter Milly having married beneath her and disgraced the family name." Milly's sole legacy consisted of "my valuable jewelry, being a diamond pendant, two emerald bracelets, a pearl necklace appraised at six thousand seven hundred dollars."

"Where can it be, Larry?" demanded Milly. "It isn't in the bank—it isn't—oh, it seems to have been a delusion of mother's. I remember those things when I was a girl, but she must have sold them—what's the matter, Larry?"

"Aw, nothing," grunted Larry. "I guess that's part of the old cat's revenge. Fergit it!"

GAME LOST

Wilmington Won From Circleville High by Score of 38 to 0.

Wilmington won the football game Friday from Circleville at Wilmington by the score of 38 to 0.

The score does not indicate how good the game was as Circleville was heavily outweighed. In the first half Circleville's captain won the toss, Circleville failed to gain and punted, Wilmington plunged the line and made several downs and then made touch-down and kicked goal.

Wilmington kicked off to Circleville. The latter failed to gain and punted to Wilmington which then plunged the line again for touchdown. Wilmington kicked goal.

Circleville chose to receive and failing to gain, punted and the kick was blocked and recovered by Wilmington and continued line plunge and then went over with a forward pass and made goal, score 21 to 0.

In the second half Circleville kicked off to Wilmington who made a long end run. Even Merriman, Circleville's quarterback, was knocked unconscious in making a flying tackle and was replaced by Jack Valentine.

Circleville held for downs, Wilmington continued line plunging for touch-down and failed to make goal. Wilmington then kicked off to Circleville and ran it back to the 50 yard line and forced to punt, Wilmington got the ball and continued the time plunging for two more touchdowns before the whistle blew score 17 to 0; final score 38 to 0.

Steele, Merriman and Mason starred for Circleville; Bonecutter and Scott for Wilmington. Due to the difference in weight straight football was adhered to thruout the game.

AMUSEMENTS

How many elements of characterization are necessary to a successful motion picture? In William de Mille's Paramount production of "Grumpy," which comes to the Met theater next Monday every essential is made use of. The cast carries on the story in a most pleasing fashion.

"Grumpy" for example, played by Theodore Roberts, one of the featured players, is a lovable, peculiar old character whose keen brain and quick wit saves every situation and who approves heartily of

Conrad Nagel, who enacts the role of Ernest Heron, a featured part, a clean-cut, pleasing young man who is entrusted with the $500,000 diamond. Ernest is in love with

May McAvoy (featured with Roberts and Nagel in her role of Virginia Bullivant, daughter of "Grumpy") May is sweet and winsome at the age when romance rules her woman's heart. She is, therefore, divided between Ernest and Jarvis (played by Casson Ferguson) who is at heart a villain and seeks to marry Virginia for her money. Jarvis attempts to get the diamond, in fact, does get it and tries to sell it.

Wolfe, one of England's worst fence for buying stolen jewels (played by Charles French. But Wolfe stays off.

Other characters in the story who lend to the mystery, to the comedy, the romance, thrills and the general plot are Susan the maid played by Bernice Frank and the parts of Keble Duddock and Dawson, played respectively by Bertram Johns, Charles Ogle and Robert Bolder.

Galleon.

The galleon was originally a warship of three or four gun-decks. The name was subsequently applied to the Spanish treasure-ships which brought from the Spanish possessions in Mexico and South America gold and silver and other wealth to Spain. They were large, unwieldy vessels, and were eagerly sought after as prizes during the times of war on account of the immense wealth they contained.

Caddy Miller has the swellest line of Stetson Hats he ever showed, Call in and look them over.

Final Summons.

Death came suddenly to Miss Mary R. Thompson on Saturday morning at 3:15 o'clock. She had been in ill health for several years and her death was the result of a complication of diseases.

Mary R. Thompson was born in Circleville, October 14, 1863 and was the daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Thompson.

She leaves two sisters, Misses Fannie and Anna Thompson, and one brother, William G. Thompson, of this city.

The funeral service will be held at the home on 147 West Mound street on Tuesday morning at ten o'clock. Rev. Floyd E. Logee will conduct the service and burial will be in Forest cemetery.

GOOD ADVICE.

All that Circleville needs to start an industrial revival is for its citizens to forget self and join hands in a whole hearted movement in bolstering up industry.

If each person will forget petty personal jealousy stop knocking and begin to boost in an effective manner the city can easily double its population in five years at the same time doubling the value of every foot of property in the city. Boost, don't knock.

James J. Hinde.

City Was Impregnable.

Symbols Had Meaning.

The shoes and sandals of the Greeks, Romans, Egyptians and Jews were ornamented with horns, crescents and other representations of the moon. At marriage ceremonies the custom of casting the shoe was combined with the throwing of flowers and various kinds of grain. These symbols and offerings seem to indicate the propitiation of a god, probably the deity who presided over productiveness.

The great industry James J. Hinde built at Sandusky and other cities, prospered because of liberal wages.

home, To live my wast-ed life a-new, For moth-er's pray-ers have fol-lowed me, Have fol-lowed me the whole world thro'.

This is the experience of a modern prodigal—who came back.

It is the story of a mother and her son.

But, above all, it is the story of a mother's prayers, as first she gave it me, and then her son.

Jack Norton entered college a clean-cut, upright boy, but returned home with a varied knowledge of poker playing and other worldly accomplishments.

His father's ambition had been to lead the words, "And Son" to the partnership sign over at the paint factory at he had started forty years ago in the room, and he had confidently expected Jack to become one of the big business men of the community.

The boy's family, and a girl in the next block by the name of Mary Bradford who had had Jack's picture on a bureau in her bed room ever since summer before he went away to college, had the same idea about his business career. But he promptly threw them all that he had other things to do.

"This is no place for me," he confided to his father. "I'm going to New York, where a man of my talents can make a proper chance. I think I'll be an architect. So if you'll let me have it is coming to me I'll use it to start at my new career. Take it from me—before long you won't know your son."

His father glanced at Jack's college hat, and rainbow shirt and white undershirt, flirting with a lavender excess of silk socks and shook his head, but he finally gave in and drew check for ten thousand dollars to start his son and heir in the battle of the world.

His mother stole upstairs to her private little nook and when she came down she timidly held out a faded, old fashioned Bible, with a mark that she had embroidered on it that she was a girl.

"This has been mine since I was a child," she said. "When you read it, remember your mother at home is praying that her boy will make the most of it, and be the biggest man in the whole world."

Jack smiled patronizingly. "She is out of date," he said to himself. "I haven't had the chance to see life and know that people who are not up to anything have outgrown their sense—but I may as well humor her."

He slipped the Bible into the bottom of his trunk, where it would be safe, waved his hand to the porter on the porch and swung out of the gate.

At Randolph, a former college friend, who had initiated Jack into the life of the city. He was soon were the words of his mother's letters, "Remember, every evening at eight o'clock I shall be praying for you—winter or summer."

When he returned to his rooms he found that he had stolen two thousand dollars.

The next morning the head of the firm had him on the carpet with the rest of the staff. Jack didn't like the look in his eyes but he told himself it was impossible to connect him with the robbery.

A week later he was called into the private office again.

"You're thru, Norton," his employer said. "You can get your time on your way out."

With money and position gone, Jack appealed to Dick, his chum, and was rudely turned down. Of course, Flossie Brandon also promptly spurned his further advances.

He thought that he was a very much deceived and wronged young man, and he hired all of the bar tenders he could find to help him forget his troubles.

At the end of the month he found himself a besotted bum, in a park with a revolver, with which he meant to end it all.

He was raising the weapon to his head when a voice checked him.

It was that of a girl on the street corner, singing to the accompaniment of a bass drum and a cornet.

The revolver fell to his side.

The girl reached the song's concluding verse:

He turned my darkness into light,
This blessed Christ of Calvary,
I'll praise His name both day and night,
That mother's prayers have followed me."

As the words died away, she turned toward the doors of a corner mission hall.

Jack slouched after the two men with her who were carrying the bass drum and the cornet.

He dropped onto a pine bench in the rear of the mission hall and fumbled with his hat.

An aisle in the center led up to a platform, on which stood a man with a beaming smile, that seemed to take in everybody in the hall.

Jack's eyes fixed themselves suddenly on a clock on the wall over the man's head. Its hands pointed exactly to eight.

He tried to remember something that kept slipping away from him and then like a flash it came to him, the forgotten postscripts of his mother's letters—"Remember, I shall always be praying for you at eight o'clock—winter or summer."

Coincidence a third time? Or mental telepathy? Or the spirit of God? Jack gives the facts. He can't give the reason for them.

All he knows was that he was staggering to his feet, and stumbling down the aisle.

Suddenly the mist faded from the picture of his mother that had been dancing in the air before him. He saw her face distinctly now, as distinctly as tho she were in the room with him. And thru her tears she was smiling. At the platform he dropped to his knees weakly.

The man on the platform reached over, and gave him a thump on the shoulders and led him to a front bench.

After the service he sat down at his side. He didn't ask questions. He was too good a judge of human nature. Before Jack knew it he was giving the other the story of his life.

"God hasn't any use for a man with a skeleton in his closet or for a quitter," said the superintendent when the boy had finished. "You can't get right with God unless you're right with men. You must go back to your firm and tell them it was you who robbed their safe."

The next afternoon the ex-Broadway kid and the superintendent of the mission were ushered into the private office of Jack's former employer.

There was a queer taste in the boy's mouth and a queer light in his eyes, but he faced the head of the firm without a quiver and told his story.

"Is it the penitentiary?" he asked when he had finished.

His employer looked at his desk for a moment in silence.

"I've got to do my duty!" he said grimly, and pushed a button before him.

Jack caught his breath. Above him he saw again the picture of his mother on her knees and he closed his eyes to blot it out. If they could only keep it from her!

"Go to it!" he said huskily. "I'm ready!"

Behind him the door opened. It must be the detectives. For an instant he stood rigid and then, without turning he held his wrists out behind him for the handcuffs.

But it was not the grip of steel that caught them. It was something soft,

A Lot About Abraham.
Being required to give an account of the patriarch Abraham, a youngster wrote: "Abraham was the father of Lot and two wives. One was called Ishmale and the other Hagar. He kept one at home and he turned the other into the desert where she became a pillar of salt by day and a pillar of fire by night."—Boston Transcript.

Most Troublesome Pest in Orchards Oyster-Shell Scale Attacks Apple and Other Fruit Trees.

The commonest, most wide spread and best-known scale insect in the United States attacking not only apple and other orchard trees but about 30 different kinds of shade trees, is the oyster-shell scale, so called because the form of the adult female scale is not unlike that of an oyster shell.

Life History of Scale.
The life history of the oyster-shell scale may be used as an illustration for the whole group. The insects pass the winter as eggs under the old female scales, these eggs having been laid the preceding fall. The eggs are very tiny, white, and vary from 30 to 100 in number. In the spring from middle May to middle June, these eggs hatch into young scale insects. The newly hatched young scales are tiny, six-legged, active creatures. Soon after hatching they leave the old mother scale and wander away in search of the new and tender growths of the tree.

They may spread not only by crawling, but by being carried on the bodies of insects or feet of birds. When they have finally settled down they insert their beaks into the tree and begin drawing out sap. They soon lose their legs and antennae and their bodies become covered with white, waxy fibers. These fibers soon mat down to form the scale covering. As the insect grows the scale gradually assumes its characteristic oyster-shell shape, within which the legless, eyeless insect is to be found.

Change Into Flies.
The male scale insects start out like the female scale insects, but when they have formed a scale and made partial growth they change into tiny winged flies which emerge from under the scales.

The control of scale insects of all kinds is chiefly by spraying, and this operation may be carried on at two entirely different periods of the year and for two entirely different purposes. In one case the spraying is done when the trees are not in foliage, that is, in the late autumn or early spring, and these sprays are known as dormant sprays because of the dormant condition of the trees.

Good Sires Increase Herd Production Rapidly

Further proof of the manner in which a producing dairy herd may be built up by using pure bred dairy bulls on common cows is afforded by the results of a several years' breeding experiment conducted at the South Dakota experiment station. The foundation cows of the experiment represented a blending of Hereford and Shorthorn blood, each cow being sired by a pure bred beef bull and out of a grade cow. Each of the foundation cows was bred repeatedly to the dairy herd bulls in the station herd and the heifers were retained and bred to the dairy bulls, thus producing second generation crosses which had 75 per cent dairy blood. Milk and butterfat records were kept for each lactation period of the grade foundation cows and their graded-up offspring.

The average yearly production of the grade beef cows was found to be 4,155 pounds of milk and 170 pounds of butterfat. The first generation heifers produced by these cows to the service of pure bred dairy sires made records averaging 6,707 pounds of milk and 200 pounds of fat. The first cross of dairy blood therefore brought an increase of 2,552 pounds of milk and 90 pounds of butterfat in each heifer's yearly production. Expressed in per cent, the first cross heifers produced 61 per cent more milk and 52 per cent more butterfat than their dams.

Wheat Is Excellent Feed for Chicks and Layers

Wheat is a good feed for young chickens and laying hens and may be fed with profit when the price is low, says D. C. Kennard, associate in animal industry, Ohio experiment station. The grain mixture may be of equal parts of corn and wheat, and the mash of 4 parts ground corn, 4 of medium ground wheat, and 2 of high-grade meat scraps or tankage.

If it is desired to use oats, the mixture suggested is corn 4, wheat 4, and oats 2 parts, and a mash of ground corn 3 parts, medium ground wheat 3, finely-ground oats 2 and meat scraps or tankage 2 parts.

Any change of feed for laying hens should be made gradually. It was pointed out, as a sudden change may seriously affect egg production.

Thunderstorm Doesn't Sour Cream, Says Iowa

Folks who are trying to deliver sweet cream to their creameries complain now and then that thunderstorms sour the cream.

The dairy department at Iowa State college says that a thunderstorm will have no effect on cream that is properly kept at a low temperature. For example, if milk and cream are kept in cans in a cooling tank through which flows all water pumped for the live stock, a thunderstorm will not affect either of them. The installation of such a cooling tank is not difficult nor very expensive and it will make possible added income from the dairy herd through a better price for sweet cream.

Christ of Andes.
In 1902 Chile and the Argentine made an unconditional treaty of arbitration and agreed to disarm part of their ships and troops. The agreement was for five years, but it has been continued since. Before that the countries were on the verge of war. To commemorate the peace a colossal figure of Christ was cast from the guns of the dismantled frontier fortress. It stands 13,000 feet above the sea on the frontier between the two countries, one hand stretched in blessing, the other holding a cross.

Father and Son.
Burt Wappel, who was in two of the events for his school, came home from the relay races the other night all tired out. He complained to his father about it. "You do have a hard time of it," Eck Wappel admitted. "When I was your age I was in every event scheduled for my father's farm. There were 14 or 15 every day in the week."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

PALESTINE

Story Told by One Who Knows It Best—
Travelogue Entertainment.

An American citizen made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land recently but it was made under different circumstances than the usual tour of Palestine, for this American was going home, home to the land of his birth.
In his boyhood he had tended his father's flocks on the hills around the Sea of Galilee. He had come to America where by dint of his own hard work he had graduated from an American university. And he returned to the land of his fathers, the Holy Land of all Christendom.

That man was Stephen A. Haboush, author, lecturer and traveler. And in his pilgrimage back to the land of his birth he saw Palestine with native
eyes and with the eyes of an American citizen. He brought back to America,
with him, a marvelous moving picture
of Palestine life and customs, thrilling scenes of the Holy places of antiquity. He brought back to the land of his adoption the real story of Palestine as it was and is, a true interpretation of the Bible story in the light of people and places which have not changed these two thousand years.

Stephen A. Haboush knows Palestine as most Americans never can know it, because it is his native land.
He knows it, too, as an American because he is an American himself, an American by choice and adoption.

People of Circleville will be privileged to hear Stephen A. Haboush
next Sunday night at the Methodist church on "Over the Hills of Galilee"
and on Monday night his travelogue
entertainment.

He is bringing to Circleville the true story of Palestine told by one who knows it best. He brings his motion pictures of places and scenes
that are inaccessible to Europeans.
His travelogue promises to be a treat.
It is something different, the like of which does not exist. The public is invited.
